Exhale

Even the speediest drawing creates powerful memories...

Being outside, immersed in nature, gives me a place to stop, exhale and breathe easy. Walking and drawing in remote places is fundamental to my creative practice, especially in these strange and unexpected times, when we all need space away from each other. Nature always provides solace, and a perfect place for social distancing. A wild and rugged coast always attracts me, as does walking in the Australian bush. Turning on my observational eye is a conscious choice - finding unexpected glimpses of colour, the effects of rapidly changing light and weather on land, sky and sea and constantly shifting around to find interesting perspectives. These are not 'views', but a combination of elements that I have observed, the abstractions within my paintings challenge the conventional notion of realism. I look for multiple moments in these works - nothing remains static for long in the landscape...

All works are acrylic on board, framed in custom made shadow box frames in Natural Australian timber (except works on paper).
